DO YOUR PLANTS GROW WELL?

H. F. Major Tells the Best Way to Care For Them.

Flowers that are to be potted should be placed in a pot one-third full of mushy soil, then packed in with enough soft dirt to fill the jar. The top layer should be looser than that below it so it will prevent evaporation of the moisture. This is what H. F. Major, landscape gardener of the University, advised in a recent lecture on the care of flowers.

"The reason the old-fashioned gardens were so successful," said Mr. Major, "was that our ancestors pressed the soil down firmly when they planted anything. They then placed a little loose dirt on top to prevent evaporation."

Mr. Major said that after the plant is potted it may be watered from the top, but it is always a good plan to set the pots in damp sand and let the soil absorb the moisture. The pot must be porous of course. That is why plants in tin cans do not do well. If watered from the top a sprinkler should be used and care taken to water the under side of the leaves.

"A great many people wonder why their plants or their soft maples are not doing well," said Mr. Major, "when the trouble is that they are root-bound. There are too many fibrous roots and not enough soil food. In the case of trees, this can be helped by plowing the ground about them very deep every two or three years."

"People also wonder why the tips of their ferns die. They forget that plants do not like to be slapped in the face or petted too much. Leave them alone, for touching them bruises the tips. Owners of greenhouses are often bothered by people bending over and smelling the flowers, thus bruising them."

The best house plants according to Mr. Major are begonias, rose geraniums, coleus, sweet Elysium, sultanias, and lantanas.

EASY FOR THE MISSOURIAN

Kansas City Star Suggests Difficulty of Reporting Chinese Convention.

The University Missourian fails to state what provision is to be made for reporting the proceedings of the next annual convention of Chinese students of America, which Columbia is bent on capturing.—Kansas City Star.

Does The Star know that the School of Journalism has among its students two Chinese, Hin Wong and H. K. Tong who can report any convention, anywhere at any time, equally well in Chinese or English? Should Columbia get the annual convention of Chinese students no difficulty will be encountered on account of languages.

ALSO INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC

Glee Club Has Added Violin, Mandolin, Guitar and Flute.

The University Glee Club which will give its first concert Friday night, February 9 in the auditorium, has twenty members. Most of these were members of the club last year.

The program is expected to please any who enjoy music. Songs that are characteristic of glee club style will fill a part of the program, but there will be several selections that vary from the regular run of glee club songs.

"The work of the club is good this year," said W. H. Pommer, professor of music. "All the members are interested in the work and show a spirit toward the success of the organization."

Three instrumental numbers have been added to the program. A violin solo will be given by Fred Wrightman. L. L. Lathrop and Arthur J. Kline will give a selection on the mandolin and guitar, and there will be a flute duet by Joseph Elliff and Charles D. McLean.

The club is composed of first tenors, C. W. Coey, N. M. Gordon, R. W. McClure, J. Earl Morgan, L. J. Morris and P. C. Simmons; second tenors, E. M. Confer, Arthur J. Kline, L. L. Lathrop, Dempsey Anderson, L. A. Waddell and C. H. White; first bass, G. H. Banks, Roe M. Lotz, Gerry Manning and Charles C. Toomey; second bass, H. S. Finleyson, R. C. Miller, W. L. Phillips and Frank J. Spiva. L. E. Thatcher is the accompanist.

REFUSES GOLD, WANTS MONEY

Short Course Student Is Dubious About Half and Double-Eagles.

"If it doesn't make any difference to you, I would rather have some money," said a student in the short course in the College of Agriculture the other day when the cashier at a bank offered him a double-eagle and a half-eagle as payment for a $25 check.

There is not much gold in circulation in Missouri and there are others in Columbia who are not well acquainted with it. A friend of the short course student took the gold at the bank and offered it in payment for a suit at one of the clothing stores. The clerk examined it very carefully for a moment and then decided it was "good."
